

Annual Report 2016

Letter From Our President

In a world of constant change, a Silver Jubilee is a rare and tremendous milestone. In 2016, Asha for Education (“Asha”) marked ours with both reflection and celebration.

From our first three founders at Berkeley University to more than 50 chapters and 1,000 volunteers around the globe, Asha has come a long way. To date, we have worked with over 400 project partners and funded over $36 million. We have grown and scaled, but the core of our work remains unchanged. We remain a proudly 100% volunteer-run organization committed to our mission to catalyze socio-economic change in India through the education of underprivileged children.

With the 25th year now in our rear-view mirror, we have not hit the brakes; rather, we have accelerated our pace to find and fund new projects and re-invigorated our volunteers to deepen our relationships with our projects and expand our impact in India.

And so, we invite you to look back, and then forward, through the lens of our 2016 Annual Report. In particular, I hope you will take the time to read over the stories of our project partners, students and volunteers; they are the true heroes of this work, and I am so grateful to them, and to everyone who will make our next 25 years as effective and as impactful as our first.

Our Vision for 2017

In 2017, we'll focus on building our community — among both the volunteer base in the U.S. and our project partners in India. We'll come together for our biennial conference in Seattle, WA where we will discuss how to prepare Asha for the next 25 years.
